PREFACE

This guide has been issued by The South African Institute of Chartered Accountants' (SAICA's) Legal Compliance Committee (LCC).

The guide seeks to inform members of the requirement to retain documents for a certain time period.

Every effort has been made to ensure that where quotes, extracts and paragraphs from legislation are referred to these references are correct. The information contained in the guide is for information purposes only.

Every effort has been made to ensure that the advice given in this guide is correct. Nevertheless, that advice is given purely as guidance to members of SAICA to assist them with particular problems relating to the subject matter of the guide, and SAICA will have no responsibility to any person for any claim of any nature whatsoever that may arise out of, or relate to, the contents of this guide.

RETENTION OF RECORDS

Owing to various legislative requirements, documents must be retained for a certain number of years, depending on the legislation.

This guide refers to the legislation and identifies the timeframe in which certain documents have to be kept.

The guide does not attempt to include all legislation, but only refers to the general legislation that impacts on a wide variety of entities.

The guide has been compiled to assist SAICA members to meet the legislative requirements when they deal with clients.

The guide is structured to refer to the relevant Act and then to the documents that should be kept and to the period of retention.

Multiple legislative requirements

Where different legislation refers to the retention of the same records/information, business must consider adhering to the most stringent of the legislative requirements. For example the Value Added Tax Act states that invoices should be kept for 5 years from the submission of the return. However, the Companies Act would require the financial records to be kept for a minimum of 7 years and therefore the company should adhere to the most stringent requirement of 7 years. Where legislation refers to different records (e.g. employment records versus accounting records), then each requirement is specific to that legislation and should be applied accordingly to the specific records.

It is important to note that the Companies Act, No 71 of 2008, has a general requirement, in respect of any information that a company is required to keep (whether in terms of the Companies Act or any other legislation), to retain such information for a period of at least seven years (or the longer period specified in the applicable legislation). Therefore, companies should ensure that company records and information are retained for no less than seven years.

The Protection of Personal Information Bill (B9D) has been approved by Parliament, but at the date of the publication of the guide had not yet been signed by the President. It is important to be aware that section 14 of the Protection of Personal Information Bill states that personal information must not be retained for any longer than is necessary to achieve the purpose for its collection. If there is no legal requirement to keep the information, it should be deleted. The Bill therefore places an obligation on the person collecting the data to delete or remove it at a certain time.

Retention of records for an “indefinite” period

In certain instances, legislation requires that records be kept for an “indefinite” period. The term “indefinite” is not defined in the legislation, but clearly requires that documents be retained for as long as the relevant entity exists. We note, however, that once an entity ceases to exist, the obligation on that entity to retain documents “indefinitely” also ceases to exist. In the case of a company, for example, the obligation to retain documents in terms of the Companies Act, No 71 of 2008, only applies to an entity that remains registered as a company.

After an entity ceases to exist, other legislation may require records to be retained, but typically only for a period of time and no longer “indefinitely”. In the case of liquidation or sequestration in terms of the Insolvency Act, No 24 of 1936, specific requirements apply to the retention of documents, discussed under Section 10 “Insolvency and Liquidation” below. As a company that has been deregistered can be re-registered, or litigation may follow in respect of the deregistered company, we propose that the records of a deregistered company be retained for a reasonable period after deregistration (we propose no less than three years).

1 AUDITORS

Auditing Profession Act, No 26 of 2005

The Auditing Profession Act, No 26 of 2005, implicitly requires that documents should be retained for three years. Section 47 requires the regulatory board, or any person authorised by it, to inspect or review the practice of a registered auditor at least every three years.

The International Standard on Quality Control (ISQC 1) paragraph A61 specifically requires the retention period for audit engagements to be no shorter than five years from the date of the auditor's report, or, if later, the date of the group auditor's report.

12 STATE-OWNED ENTITIES

Public Finance Management Act, No 1 of 1999

State-owned entities have to apply the Public Finance Management Act (PFMA), No 1 of 1999. Entities that fall under the definition of the PFMA are national and provincial government, which include entities such as the Human Rights Commission, the Competition Board, Eskom and Denel. The PFMA has a list of all the entities that it applies to in the schedules attached to the Act.

Section 40(1)(a) of the PFMA states that: “The accounting officer for a department, trading entity or constitutional institution must keep full and proper records of the financial affairs of the department, trading entity or constitutional institution in accordance with any prescribed norms and standards.”

Section 55(1)(a) of the PFMA states that: “The accounting authority for a public entity must keep full and proper records of the financial affairs of the public entity.”

The Treasury Regulations, Regulation 17(2) to the PFMA states that accounting officers must retain all financial information in its original form as follows:

- (1) Information relating to one financial year – should be retained for one year after the audit report for the relevant financial year has been tabled in Parliament or the provincial legislature.
- (2) Information relating to more than one financial year – should be retained for one year after the audit report for the last of the financial years to which the information relates.

If the retention period has expired the information may be stored in an alternative form that still ensures the integrity and reliability of the information. The Treasury Regulations provide the detailed guidance to this section of the PFMA regarding the retention of documents.

State-owned entities that are registered companies must comply with the requirements that are the most stringent between the Companies Act and PFMA.

Municipal Finance Management Act, No 56 of 2003

The Municipal Finance Management Act (MFMA), No 56 of 2003, applies to all municipalities and municipal entities and has the goal of securing sound and sustainable management of the financial affairs of municipalities and other institutions in the local sphere of government.

With regard to the retention of documents, it states in Section 62(1)(b) that:

The accounting officer of a municipality is responsible for managing the financial administration of the municipality, and must for this purpose take all reasonable steps to ensure that full and proper records of the financial affairs of the municipality are kept in accordance with any prescribed norms and standards.

Owing to the absence of more specific guidelines, we advise that the same periods as for the PFMA are used, except where other specific Regulations are available for use in the various industries.

13 TAX

The Income Tax Act, No 58 of 1962, is the Act that governs all the laws relating to income taxes and donations and the Value Added Tax Act, No 89 of 1991, provides for the taxation of the supply of goods and services as well as the importation of goods.
